Name: Hamza, Age 24

Background: Tech-savvy but first time using a recipe app

As soon as I opened the app, I liked how clean and colorful it looked. The illustrations were friendly, and the fonts were readable. I didn't feel overwhelmed — I could easily understand what the app was about.

I tried swiping, and it worked right away. That was great because I wasn't looking for a 'next' button — swipe felt more natural. Each onboarding screen gave me a good reason to use the app, like saving recipes or exploring premium ones.

At the end, the 'Go to Premium' button stood out well, though I was expecting it to take me to a subscription or preview page. Overall, the experience was smooth, and I'd definitely continue into the main app if this were a real product.

Name: Sana, Age 27

Background: Home-based baker, uses food apps casually

The app opened with a really cute screen — I liked the vibe immediately. The illustrations felt like they were made for someone like me, who loves cooking but doesn't want anything too technical.

I naturally swiped to the next screen, and everything worked smoothly. It didn't take me long to understand the app helps with saving and exploring new recipes. That's exactly what I want from a cooking app. One thing that stood out was how easy it was to read everything. Nothing felt crowded or confusing. I liked the 'Go to Premium Now' button too, even though I wasn't sure what would happen next. Honestly, I'd give this a try if I found it on the app store.
